Two colleagues are having a conversation about problems in the company.

A:What time's the meeting?

B:In half an hour. Have you got a copy of the agenda yet?

A:Yeah, I got an email yesterday.

B:I hope it's more successful than last month's – we really got sidetracked over the budget issues, didn't we?

A: Yeah, we wasted a lot of time . And when we finally got back to the point, John had to leave early.

B:Do you know what it was about? Is he coming today?

A:No idea -- I've been trying to get hold of him all day but I keep getting his voicemail!

B:I heard the production department are trying to get to grips with the schedule for the new project.

A:Well, the last one finally got underway six weeks late!

B:Yeah, I think the Board are all worried that they'll get hammered by the shareholders at the next AGM.

A:Well, the financial position has got a lot worse over the last few months so they'll have to do something before things get out of hand.
